Jostein Gulbrandsen - Looking Ahead

This quartet is a new project and the third album release from guitarist Jostein Gulbrandsen. Originally from Namsos, Norway, Gulbrandsen has been based in New York since 2001. All the 8 songs are written by Gulbrandsen and are ranging from hard-swinging up tempo's to calm 3/4 ballads. You can still find traces of Gulbrandsen's Scandinavian background in his music and improvisations, but there is also an element from the hectic and urban New York-lifestyle. During the last couple of years, Gulbrandsen has played numerous trio gigs with Mike McGuirk and Mark Ferber and has also worked with Japanese pianist Megumi Yonezawa in several other projects. She is adding another dimension to the group with her sophisticated and harmonically complex playing style.

Trondheim Voices & Asle Karstad – Rooms & Rituals

"This vocal ensemble reminds little of what you've heard before" writes author and music writer Richard Williams (The Guardian) in the liner notes of Rooms & Rituals. Trondheim Voices brings performers from different backgrounds, counting up to 10 female singers. They have premiered pieces from a number of excellent composers, including Marilyn Mazur, Jon Balke and Christian Wallumrød. Trondheim Voices often works site-specific and uses unique technology made especially for the ensemble. Voices are the only source of sound on "Rooms & Rituals", and all the music is improvised.

Otomo Yoshihide & Paal Nilssen-Love – 19th of May 2016

If ever a title in the PNL catalogue sells itself it will be this duo recording of Otomo Yoshihide and Paal Nilssen-Love. For anybody remotely interested in improvised music these two names should be well known. Paal Nilssen-Love is of course the Norwegian drummer behind numerous projects – and the PNL Records label. Otomo Yoshihide is perhaps Japan's most prolific and far-reaching experimental composer and musician in the last 30 years, with a field of activity so broad that almost none of his fans knows about everything he does – from pure noise and free improvised music, from elaborate sound installations and conceptual projects, to pop music and movie scores, Otomo has done more than anybody. The same goes for the range of instruments he plays – turntable, electronics, piano, voice – but more than anything Otomo Yoshihide is a guitarist, known for pushing the limits of what can be done with six strings and an amplifier to extremes.

As a duo Otomo and Nilssen-Love has a long history. First with Otomo joining The Thing on several tours and recordings, then various contallations with different musicians before settling into a steady drums and guitar duo. "19th of May 2016" captures the pair in front of an ecstatic audience at DOM Cultural Center in Moscow on their 2016 tour. As evident on the album, this is clearly no polite first-time meeting. The sense of assured musical assault captured here makes listeners wish they'd hopped on a plane to Moscow in May three years ago. But in lieu of a time machine this CD is a good alternative, and offers a front row seat to a night of sonic mayhem you'll be glad you picked up.

Mars Williams /Tollef Østvang - Painted Pillars

Mars Williams – saxophones /// Tollef Østvang – drums . This duo is a collaboration between Norwegian drummer Tollef Østvang and reed player Mars Williams from Chicago. As heard on this live recording from Artacts '17 in St. Johann in Tirol, Austria, the collaboration is a powerful, spontaneous and unpredictable duo constantly searching for new and unheard musical landscapes. Mars Williams is an open-minded musician, who commutes easily between free jazz, funk, hip-hop and rock. Despite his busy touring schedule with Liquid Soul and The Psychedelic Furs, he is an active collaborator with improvisers such as Ken Vandermark, Jim Baker, Hamid Drake, Michael Zerang, Kent Kessler, Joe McPhee, Dave Rempis and Paal Nilssen-Love. Norwegian drummer Tollef Østvang is a key figure in Trondheim's jazz environment, and has established himself in recent years as an active musician at home and abroad. He collaborates frequently with improvisers like Joe McPhee, John Dikeman and Martin Küchen. Over the past few years he has established a close connection to the Chicago scene.
